How to care for garden furniture?

The furniture to be maintained is first brushed parallel to the grains of the tree with a hose that is not very pressurized or with water, liquid soap and a medium hard brush.

This way, your garden furniture will not accumulate dust and mold. After this process, the furniture must dry completely.

The iroko tree is of African origin. Similar to the teak tree that grows in Asian rainforests, the Iroko tree is a variant of the same species that grows in the African Rainforest. Its origin is based on the Ivory Coast. Trees with a height of 130 meters provide a sustainable production opportunity without disturbing the natural balance due to their rapid growth.

The Characteristics of the Iroko Tree

The wood, which has a yellowish color after processing, turns brown within one month when it comes into contact with oxygen. The grains, which stand out in a lighter tone compared to the brown of the timber, create an elegant appearance.

Due to its heavy, hard, oily and high density structure, Iroko wood is indispensable for durable furniture. The durable iroko tree shows high resistance to natural rot, insects and diseases. It dries easily and does not deform after processing.

We invite you to take a look at our products to meet the elegance and durability of Iroko wood, which is a completely natural and imported material.

What to consider when choosing garden furniture?

Area Planning

It will save you time if you measure the area where you will use your garden furniture and choose the furniture accordingly before deciding on the product you want to purchase. This way, you will not have problems like not fitting into the space or being too small after purchasing the product.

Wood

Many tree types such as teak, acacia, cedar and chestnut can be used in garden furniture, and each tree has its own characteristics and maintenance method. If you want a durable and easily maintained tree, you should choose teak, but if your budget for garden furniture is lower, you can choose other tree types.

Important Details to Consider When Choosing Garden Furniture

The main components of garden furniture are as follows:

Synthetic and Natural Rattan

Synthetic rattan is produced from plastic, while natural rattan is a plant that generally grows in the Far East. Natural rattan requires maintenance at least once a year, but synthetic rattan does not require any maintenance. You can clean it when necessary with soap and water.

Cushions

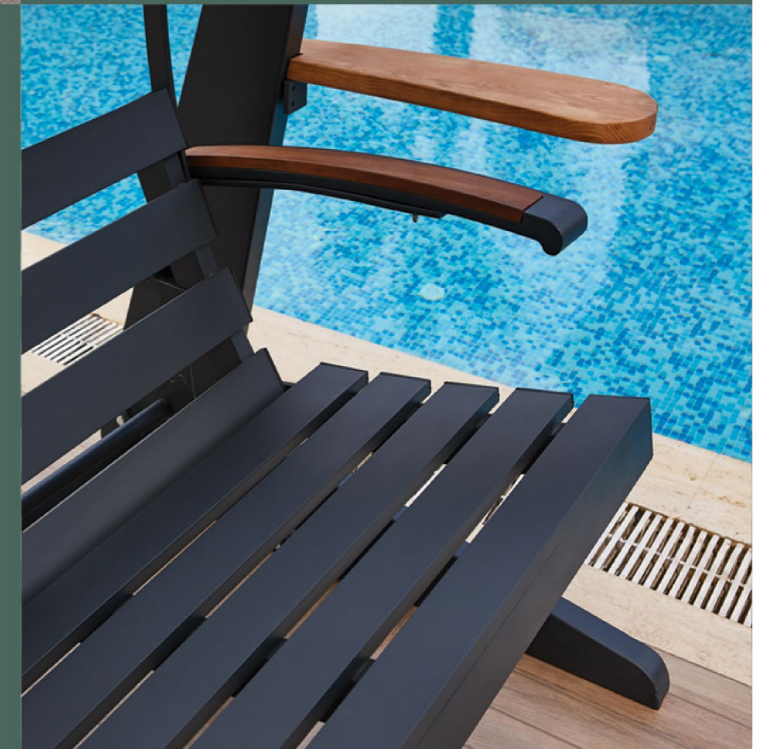

Our Waterproof cushions are specially designed and manufactured for outdoor furniture.

Leisure and comfort are at the forefront.

Plastic and Aluminum

Garden furniture made of plastic and aluminum is more affordable than others, does not rust and does not require maintenance. If it gets dirty, you can easily clean it with soap and water.

Things to know about cleaning rattan furniture

Never use chemical cleaners or stain removers while cleaning your rattan furniture. Natural cleaners and fresh water should be used on very dirty surfaces. It should be wiped with a soft cloth or sponge and then completely dried. Synthetic rattans can be affected by sunlight to varying degrees depending on the quality of the product you purchase. Therefore, when not in use, they should be properly stacked and protected whenever possible. The material of the inner frame of your rattans is very important. Because it is generally cheap, those in which thin iron is used will cause rust when exposed to water and humidity. Therefore, rattans with an aluminum frame should be preferred. Rattans with an iron frame should not be washed directly with water.

Garden Furniture care and storage conditions

Garden furniture should be washed with fresh water, preferably just wiped.

When buying garden furniture from rattan material, it is important that the inner frame is made of stainless material so that it does not leak rust after rain or cleaning.

Lubricating the Iroko products or table and chair sets with teak oil at the beginning of the season will extend the life of the products. Iroko products do not need heavy maintenance such as sanding.

After cleaning your rattan, iroko and aluminum furniture thoroughly at the end of the season, covering it with a tarpaulin so that it will not be affected by external factors and if possible, keeping it in a closed place will extend the life of the product. It will be beneficial to keep the cushions of the product separately during wintering.
